

The Boy and the Cloth of Dreams

A contemporary fairytale about overcoming, fear. There was once a boy who had a cloth of dreams. His grandmother made it for him when he was born to keep the dark night things away. But one day he tripped on it and tore it, and through the holes a chain of nightmares came -a frightful hag chased him, a huge fish swallowed him...He asks his grandmother to mend the cloth. She tells him he must climb a dark staircase to the roof and fetch threads from the sun and the moon. Plucking up his courage, the boy does just that, overcoming his fear. Jenny Koralek is the author of Going Out with Hatty, The Cobweb Curtain and Hannukah. James Mayhew has illustrated Dare You! and Koshkas Tales - Stories For Russia.
